

Essay #3

There are many aspects of my personality that would make me an important part of the diverse student body at the University of Rochester.

One aspect of my personality is that I am very disciplined. I feel that my discipline helps me in doing many everyday activities, from things as small as waking up, to things like doing homework and handing assignments in on time. My discipline has arisen because of my love of football and my desire to improve. When I was a sophomore in high school my grades weren't very high and I wasn't a member of any sports teams so I decided to join the football team, this was where I established a sense of discipline. Soon my grades went up very considerably and I eventually made honor roll, I have been on it ever since.

I have also learned many things about myself through academics, I have learned how to be responsible, thoughtful and considerate to people. Also a major thing that I learned along the way is commitment, commitment to academics, myself and football. I feel that having a strong sense of commitment keeps you focused on your goals and keeps you away from negative things that may be going on around you.

I feel that all of these things will help me contribute to Rochesters diversity. All of my personaliy traits and ideas are very strong and I feel I would fit perfectly in this diverse environment.